

Hunting Causes Pain and Suffering

Let Animals Live

Hunting is a violent form of entertainment that injures and kills animals, ripping families apart and leaving countless young ones orphaned. Quick kills are rare—many animals endure prolonged, painful deaths. Let animals live. Don't hunt them!

peta2

Hunting may have been necessary for survival hundreds of years ago, but today, it's nothing more than a sadistic form of recreation. It's beyond creepy to stalk and kill animals just for the thrill of it. This is no way to "enjoy nature." You can "shoot" animals with your camera, watch them from a distance in nature, and let them live.

© iStock.com/Harry Collins

WHAT'S WRONG WITH HUNTING?

- 1 It tears families apart. If you didn't cry when Bambi's mom was killed, do you have a heart? Every year, countless animals experience this trauma when their parents are killed, sometimes right in front of them.
- 2 It isn't about conservation or population control. Even when unusual natural occurrences cause overpopulation, nature would work to regulate the numbers. Human hunters disrupt this natural balance because they prefer to kill the largest, strongest individuals. Human encroachment on animals' natural territories leads to human-wildlife conflicts and creates a false perception of overpopulation.
- 3 It's not a sport. Sports involve fair competition between consenting individuals or teams. Hunters use rifles, shotguns, or high-powered crossbows—weapons that no animal can outrun or defend themselves against.
- 4 There are few regulations. Most hunting is done on private land, where laws that protect wildlife often don't apply or are difficult to enforce. This means animals can suffer and die slowly and even endangered animals can be killed.
- 5 Violence against animals can lead to violence against humans. Like other forms of casual or "thrill" violence, hunting leads to dangerous desensitization to the suffering of others.

HOW You CAN TAKE ACTION

To combat hunting in your area, use school projects like presentations, research papers, or persuasive essays as an opportunity to educate; post "No Hunting" signs on your land; and protest organized hunts. Inform others of what's wrong with gunning down animals for "sport" by sharing peta2.com/hunting.

peta2

CONNECT WITH US!

@peta2

@peta2official

hello@peta2.com